

Can the base station be removed from the container

You pick up a lot of loot as a solo pilot, and it's just so much more efficient to drop it in a nearby station and use it to reload if necessary. I even have some fully fit ships scattered about for when I'm in a pinch.

As part of the Base Computer Archives quest, I built and supplied continuous power to the big storage unit in my base. But it appears that the only way I can put things in it and take them...

Although the construction of a Station Container is much like that of other Cargo Containers a Station Container is far too big to fit in a ship's cargo hold and is only used for storage and inventory ...

You can take items from a container if those items are not locked. If they are, then you need to right click and unlock them. Those unlock/lock events are registered in the containers log, so the owner can ...

I want to use it as a base, but my other friends have advised me to be careful as my ship may be removed by the space station administrator. I want to know if this space station is safe and ...

The sending base has four other cargo links that work flawlessly, sending resources to other systems with no issues. I decided to try moving the outpost to a different biome on the same ...

IIRC (not on Eve computer) you choose blueprint selector, facility and then either hangar or can in hangar before selecting the individual blueprint. Then you choose the materials input ...

The Containers screen allows you to create, manage, and remove containers from Container Station. From here, users can review information such as the status and creation date of ...

Items inside a container can not be repackaged, repaired, contracted, sold or delivered - they have to be moved to the item hangar for these actions. Station containers use logging. You ...
